

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) and is projected to increase by a further 1.5 million by 2010 (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (1999) has identified the need to develop a new paradigm of care for the ageing population, one that is based on the concept of 'active ageing'. This paradigm is based on the idea that older people should be able to live independently, to participate in social and cultural activities, and to be able to contribute to society.

The Department of Health (1999) has identified a number of key areas for action in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) the need to improve the health and well-being of older people; (2) the need to improve the social and cultural lives of older people; and (3) the need to improve the economic lives of older people.

The Department of Health (1999) has also identified a number of key areas for action in order to improve the health and well-being of older people. These include: (1) the need to improve the physical health of older people; (2) the need to improve the mental health of older people; and (3) the need to improve the social and cultural lives of older people.
